Citizens prepare for Graffiti Clean-up Days

Graffiti Clean-up Days sponsored by the city's Community Advisory Committee on graffiti, will be held Saturday, April 24 and Sunday, April 25, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Come join the fun in celebrating the kick-off of the anti-graffiti/vandalism campaign in Lemon Grove by painting out graffiti.

Please come join the fun with fellow residents and business owners at 3232 Main St. to help paint out graffiti throughout Lemon Grove. Or, stop by and learn more about efforts to curb the graffiti problem.

Graffiti removal work will be performed in small groups and work is expected to last two or three hours.

All materials and supplies will be provided. Free T-shirts or painter's caps provided to all work crews. Please wear grubby clothes to paint in if you plan to participate in graffiti removal.

For more information regarding this event or would like to participate as a crew leader, please call the Graffiti Tip Hotline 685-2093.

School districts hosting community open houses

The Lemon Grove School District will join public schools throughout East County in hosting school visitations during school hours on April 16.

Unlike traditional open-house events which focus only on parents, this event is planned to include community members who do not have children in the district.

These East County open-houses will familiarize local residents, business leaders and community representatives with the wide range of school programs today.

Participating districts include Cajon Valley, La Mesa Spring Valley, Grossmont Union High School, Santee and others.

A parent involvement conference for all districts will be held April 17 at Valhalla High School. The conference is designed to help parents of students at all grade levels work more effectively with their children and the schools.

For conference registration information, call 390-3600. Valhalla High School is located at 1725 Hillsdale Road in El Cajon.

Grossmont Hospital and Sharp form sexual assault response teams

On April 1, Grossmont Hospital and Sharp Cabrillo Hospital activated a Sexual Assault Response Team (SART of Sharp HealthCare), to provide medical and psycho-social services and evidentiary exams for victims of sexual assault in the San Diego area. The implementation of this multidisciplinary team at the two hospitals follows the San Diego County 1991 Regional Assault Evidentiary Exam Task Force started by Susan Golding.

Emergency personnel responding to a sexual assault will call a centralized number at Sharp Cabrillo. The patient and law enforcement agencies will be directed to the closest of the two facilities, whether Grossmont or Sharp Cabrillo. Upon receiving the call, an on-call nurse and a patient advocate will be notified. The nurse and the advocate will meet the patient at the hospital. Psycho-social intervention will begin immediately to prevent further trauma.

In the past, care of sexual assault patients was fragmented; they were seen in the emergency department with other patients, many times having to wait for treatment while more serious cases were seen ahead of them. Often, victims had to recount the incident to many different caregivers.

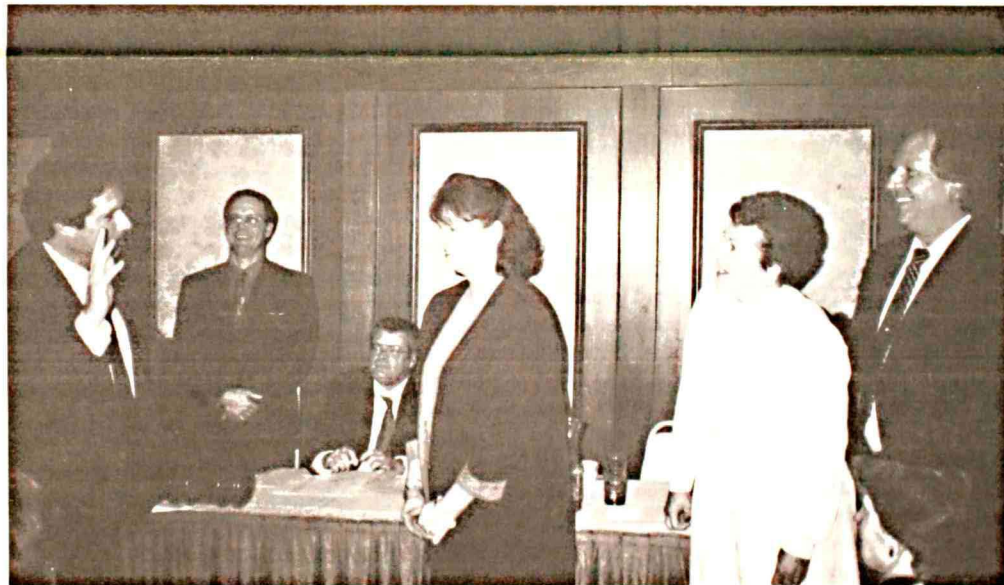

Sexual assault victims no longer will be treated in an emergency room unless there are major injuries which must be treated first. The SART room minimizes stress and anxiety for the victim.

SART has contracts or agreements to provide services with La Mesa, El Cajon, Coronado, National City, Chula Vista, the San Diego Police Department and the San Diego Sheriff's Office. Expenses for the evidentiary exam will be billed to the law enforcement agencies, not the patients.

Chamber of Commerce installs new officers

Mayor Brian Cochran (left), following in the Dorman tradition, swore in the new Chamber officers. Joining Dr. Stewart as officers are Vice President Marjean McKinney, Secretary Cookie Ringhand and Treasurer Don Warrant.

Assemblyman Tom Connolly gave an impromptu response to Mayor Cochran's "State of the City" speech. Cochran stated that the city was on the edge of an abyss, and the state is the force that could "push us over the edge." Though sympathetic to the city's situation, Connolly is unable at this time to explain where the state will find the billions needed to balance the budget.

Elaine Garcia swam the 200 individual medley for automatic CIF consideration and Brian Hancock also made automatic CIF consideration for the diving team. Both teams participated against Santana on Tuesday. The Girls Novice Championships were played at Mount Miguel yesterday. Both teams will next compete against Helix, April 13 at 4 p.m., girls at Helix, boys at Mount Miguel.

Following the parent visits to classes with their students today, teachers will attend a districtwide lecture at the El Cajon Performing Arts Center to hear guest speaker Zachary Clemens.

The M.E.Ch.A. Club is holding a Parent Dinner tomorrow from 6 to 10 p.m. to introduce parents to the activities of the organization. M.E.Ch.A. is supervised by Spanish teacher Luis Castro.

The Review invites all area schools to submit information of interest to the community. We congratulate and thank the El Trovador staff and advisor Pat Curtis for the great job they do - week after week!

County seeking public input on budget matters

Citizens with suggestions on how San Diego County government can save money or tips on perceived improper activities are invited to call the county's new 24-hour anonymous Budget Hotline at 570-1200.

The hotline, originally proposed by Supervisor Dianne Jacob and adopted by the Board of Supervisors as part of a "citizen-based budget principles" plan, will solicit suggestions and comments on any facet of county government operations.

County Auditor and Controller Robert Booker said he anticipates as many as 600 calls per week; each taped telephone message will be reviewed by a staff person who, in turn, will report to the auditor on possible budget savings or perceived improper activities related to county government.

School library extends hours

The library at Lemon Grove Middle School is now open before and after school. Students may arrive as early as 7:30 a.m. and may stay as late as 4 p.m.

These new hours will continue for the remainder of this school year as part of the district's efforts to provide for the needs of students.

Tutoring and help with homework is provided. Students have access to two computers and an electronic encyclopedia. Students who need to call their parents with last-minute plans to stay after school may use the library phone.

Funding for these new hours is a pilot project on the part of the district.

In light of increasing gang problems in the neighborhood, and because many parents work and students go home to an empty house, administrators desire to provide a safe and helpful place in which students can study.

MADD awareness event at Helix

The San Diego Insurance Womens' Annual Campaign against drunk driving begins the week of April 5, with events held at Helix High School.

The drinking and driving awareness program is sponsored in conjunction with M.A.D.D. Cash awards and prizes will be presented to first, second, and third place winners of art and essay contests. All entries must be received by April 28. Winners will be announced and awards will be presented at the schools the week of May 16th. Art and essays will be displayed locally May 23-June 14, and displayed at the San Diego Insurance Womens' Booth.

Lutherans hold Easter services

The members of Lemon Grove Lutheran Church, 2055 Skyline Dr., cordially invite the public to share in all of its Holy Week and Easter services.

Holy Thursday Services, April 8, 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Special Music and Communion.

Good Friday Tenebrae Service, April 9, 7:30 p.m. Special Music.

About the 4th century the church began using a solemn service known as Tenebrae. It involved the lighting and extinguishing of candles as a reminder not only of the passion and the crucifixion of the Savior, but also of the death and darkness of the tomb.

As the story unfolds, darkness increases as light after light is extinguished.

Easter Sunrise Service, April 11, 6:30 a.m. Special Music, followed by an Easter breakfast in Luther Hall at 7:30 a.m.

Easter Festival Service, April 11, 9 a.m. Special Music by the Bell Choir Chancel Choir and Brass Choir.

Batter up! at the Senior Center

The opening day of baseball will be celebrated by the seniors at the Lemon Grove Senior Center on Tuesday, April 6.

The festivities will begin at 10 a.m. with a baseball game in the patio. Participants of the Nutrition Program and the Adult Day Health Care Program will play nerf baseball.

Popcorn and soft drinks will be available for the spectators. At 11 a.m., Ed Runge from the San Diego Padres will entertain in the multipurpose room, telling stories from his 26 years as an umpire for the American League.

Lunch will follow at 11:30. Reservations for lunch can be made by calling 460-0430.

JV Matadors victorious

Mount Miguel High School's junior varsity baseball team was victorious Tuesday in a home game against the El Cajon Braves.

Contributing to the 10-1 win was Matador Mike Rupp who drove in a three-run homer and Brain Terrell who smacked in two runs.

The JV Matadors are now 7-1 for the season.

B-Words Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Banding together

A group of very special people gathered recently to respond to the horror of crime and violence that pervades our communities. The alarming increase of the abuse of people, by people, has finally caused responsible members of our society to stand up and say "NO MORE."

The occasion was called a Safe Communities Summit and it brought leaders from all walks of life together to commit to doing something about this tragedy.

Legislators, judges, teachers, law enforcement professionals, and representatives from all over the county stood up and signed the pledge to be part of the solution to the community cancerous disease that is destroying us. Mayor Golding, District Attorney Miller, Supervisor Bilbray, and Chief Burgreen were followed to the lectern to speak in favor of this movement. There was a lot of poking holes in the air with upraised fingers, but the commitments were sincere, concise, and promising.

"We, the leaders and the residents of the communities of San Diego County pledge to unite in our commitment, dedication and action to make the communities of San Diego County, safe places to live. We pledge to use our position, power, experience, wisdom and energy to develop community-action groups in our local communities which will focus on the following:

Establishing ZERO TOLERANCE behavior and promote standards on our school campuses and in our communities which will allow us to eliminate violence. Training and educating the community. Prevention activities. Intervention services. Responding in crisis." This was declared by the community and school leaders, and the people of San Diego County on this 1st day of March 1993 we will be committed to taking steps to make San Diego County a better place to live."

This is a great start and it is my fervent hope that it will continue and show some results. Lemon Grove was represented by Dr. Joe Farley of our school District, Jan LaValle of the P.T.A., and myself. The plan is that interested citizens of our town will volunteer to be part of this movement and to participate in the planning, training, and implementation of a successful program that will turn around the frightening trend that faces us today. I am sure that Sheriff Jim Roache will cooperate in this effort, and it remains to be seen how much support we get from the residents of our little town.

As I see this, it is a serious chance to go back to what I have always thought to be the best deterrent to crime that was ever utilized. That idea was what kept most of my peers from going bad in the days of my youth. It was the fear of PUNISHMENT. In recent years, it seems to me that we have become a nation of "excusers" and that the fear of responsibility for one's actions is non-existent. Our legal community seems to be able to explain away every kind of crime or harm that one person inflicts upon another. The fault may well lie in the home, the school, the church, and society in general, but passing the buck does not solve the problem. If these leaders are serious about "ZERO TOLERANCE for crime and violence," then I am encouraged and eager to do my part in seeing it through. The support of the community is imperative in this effort, and will be enthusiastically welcomed.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

According to Webster, the word "liberal" is variously defined as "favorable to reform or progress, not bound by orthodox or established tenets in politics or religion" and "a person who believes in progressive reform, especially in the direction of conferring more power on the people." Nowhere in this definition does one see the concept of villain, demon or traitor. And yet, in today's political lexicon, liberalism is indeed demonized by far too many as something unhealthy and virtually un-American!

Let me state plainly, at this point, what has most certainly been obvious to anyone who has read this column with any regularity: I am a liberal. Despite this, I do not view myself as misguided, treacherous or un-American. I love my country dearly; I served her with pride in the Armed Forces; and I have never missed voting in an election since I turned 21.

Yet, if you would listen to a large portion of the American body-politic, I am far, far from the national mainstream and, in some way, vaguely dangerous!

Looking back on how this seems to have come about is most instructive and, on occasion, somewhat frightening. Certainly, the struggle between the forces of reform and those of status quo is age-old and in this country, with the advent of the 20th century, played itself out most often in the efforts of labor unions to abolish child labor, sweat shops and 60-hour work weeks. But it was Franklin D. Roosevelt, after 12 years of Republican minimal government and the onset of the 1930s depression, who systematized the liberal agenda into his "New Deal" policies and drew the eternal enmity of Wall Street and big business. They especially hated him because he was one of their own - an upper New York State patrician who appeared to be acting like a wild and wooly socialist.

The struggle stepped up its pace with the advent of the Cold War and the arrival on the scene of Richard Nixon and Joseph McCarthy. Both discovered that by imputing Communist-tinged treason to anyone with a strongly liberal agenda, they could reap electoral gold. As a result, leaning to the left became highly suspect in this country and the suspicion - albeit not the total venom of those days - has remained.

Ronald Reagan, in his presidency, put a new twist on the old scenario. We liberals were no longer closet traitors - instead, we were fuzzy-headed, tax-and-spend folks who, if elected, would destroy the nation through our welfare spending.

'Liberal' not a dirty word

Apparently, he was believed - he was elected twice. Of course, during his stewardship and with the help of a defense department that "never met a weapon system or a $700 toilet seat it didn't like," the deficit reached the $3 trillion mark, and, while the rich got richer, the poor got poorer and more numerous.

It was George Bush, however, who put the venom back into liberal-baiting. Faced with an election in 1992 in which he could find no positive grounds on which to run, he chose instead to make a truly dirty word out of "liberal." At times his rhetoric reached a level in which we liberals appeared to be vile enemies of the country instead of merely a different philosophical viewpoint.

As a result, in order to win, Bill Clinton had to sound more and more like a conservative Republican.

Rhetoric is, of course, only rhetoric. We were told as children that "sticks and stones would break our bones, but words will never hurt us." We have come to learn that this bromide is not true. Words have the power to bring about great good or wreak unheard of evil. And the current socio-political definition of words such as "liberal" and "conservative" are all too often an impediment to progress. Too many of our citizens believe that anything labeled "liberal" is bad for their government. A growing number of people are beginning to see the word "conservative" as referring only to the right wing radical fringe of our society. Neither word deserves such definition.

"Democrat" and "Republican" have become increasingly obsolete words and have been replaced by "liberal" and "conservative" - this despite the reality that the current Democratic Party is basically quite conservative and the Republicans of the 1992 election fell heavily into the radical right category.

Today there remains a strong, needed liberal agenda in this country. It includes better education for all, better pre- and post-natal care for the poor, adequate medical coverage for all, a compassionate and effective welfare system, decent low-cost housing and equal opportunity. I, for one, refuse to see this concerned and caring agenda being made to seem dangerous, or worse, because it carries with it the label of "liberal."

From Where I Sit

Never too old

by Frank Andrews

Through our son's insistence, I attended Cuyamaca College for a short time to learn about the computer.

Not only did I learn the computer, but I also learned a lot about the students of this modern age. Most of the teacher's aides were the smartest ones of the class.

If I needed school work help, I would ask one of my Far East buddies. If they wanted some advice about life in general, they would confide in me. I guess that I was the grandfather figure of the class, and I loved it.

Our son, Dannie, built a computer for me, and it turned me from a "sofa spud" to someone alive again. I now get "saddle sores" from sitting at the keyboard too long.

I not only have to credit my doctor, but also Dannie, for my resurrection. There are millions of "sofa spuds" just like I was, rocking away their life - waiting to be taken home. The retirement homes are filled with such seniors with nothing to do or think about besides their ailments.

I strongly suggest to other retirees that what happened in my life could happen to them. It doesn't have to be a computer, just put it down on paper, using pen, pencil, typewriter, or any means of writing - but just "write."

The manuscript could be their thoughts of the day, poetry, or even a complete story of their life - a legacy to be left behind for their loved ones.

Going back to school can pertain to any age. Our two beautiful daughters can attest to that, as they both graduated from college at mid-life, against many odds. Both young ladies have been married and are actually starting a new life.

Our daughter, Mari, quit a top management position with a local food chain to move up to Chico for college and a master's degree. She wants to go into teaching, maybe as a history professor. She just sent us an article she wrote for the Orion, the college newspaper, which was very good and worthy of publication. My wife bragged, "I guess she is just a chip off the old block."

I kid Mari by saying, "As soon as you graduate from college you will be eligible for social security." But, she has done very well in school and will graduate in May with top honors.

Our daughter, Patty, with two small kids to raise as a single parent, has already graduated and is teaching elementary school in Arizona. Our hats are off with all our love to both of them for their determination and dedication for what they have done and are doing.

I have had, over the years, enough hours, certificates, and credits at college level in many fields of endeavor to qualify me for some kind of degree, specializing in real estate, contracting and several trades. I have always been eager to learn and tried to associate myself with people from whom I could learn.

Oh, if I only had it to do it over again! Would I have done anything differently?

because you have been shaped and molded by a collection of circumstances and events that you alone have experienced.

So while it's true that your beliefs - or your age, gender or family background - do reveal a little something about you, they don't tell me enough to feel as if I really know you. Not by a long shot. That's a journey that will take some time as we travel into your mind, your heart and your soul. But if we can take that trip together, we'll discover something incredibly satisfying along the way: that the reward lies, not so much in arriving at our ultimate destination, but in the journey itself.

And who knows? Maybe we'll shoot down another stereotype or two while we're at it.

New outpatient facility for Grossmont Hospital

On April 28 a new outpatient surgery facility will open to serve East County. The Grossmont Plaza Surgery Center is a 14,500-square foot center located on the lower level of the new Grossmont Plaza Medical Building at 5525 Grossmont Center Drive in La Mesa (next to Grossmont Hospital).

It's the largest free-standing surgical center in San Diego County, containing seven operating rooms, a 123-bay primary recovery area and an 8-bay secondary recovery area.

"Advances in medical technology have dramatically changed the way a wide variety of surgical procedures are performed. A large number of them now can be done on an outpatient basis," said Jan Lee Kwai, director for the center, which is owned and operated by Grossmont Hospital.

"We're very excited about the center," said Kwai. "It's equipped with the most advanced, state-of-the-art medical technology available."

Kwai said the Grossmont Plaza Surgery Center serves patients who are healthy overall and are having elective procedures. The Grossmont Hospital Ambulatory Surgery department, located in Grossmont Hospital, will continue to care for surgical outpatients who have more acute health problems.

There goes another stereotype

It was another frenzied Monday morning, and my friend and I were taking advantage of the commute to discuss the previous weekend's activities. He talked about football, winterizing the car and a great little Chinese restaurant he and his wife had "discovered." I mentioned my Little League basketball team, my baby daughter's first word and that we finally got around to seeing "Driving Miss Daisy" on video.

And then I happened to mention a relevant point I had heard during a sermon in church, something that had tied into "Miss Daisy's" message of love and friendship.

"Hold it," my friend interrupted. "You mean you actually went to church on a gorgeous day like yesterday? Who died?"

"Nobody," I replied, more than a little surprised at his incredulous tone. Then, as if attempting to explain a behavior that suddenly seemed ... well, inexplicable, I blurted out a further confession: "I go to church every week. Rain or shine."

This revelation seemed almost too much for my friend to handle. "I didn't think anyone went to church anymore," he said. "At least, not anyone so ... so ..."

I knew what he was groping for, the dreaded "N" word.

"Normal?" I offered.

"Yeah, that's it," he said, "normal. You don't seem at all ... well, you know ..."

"Weird?" I suggested.

"Exactly," he continued. "You seem like such a regular guy. Why do you have to go to church?"

I tried to explain that I don't go because I have to, but because I want to. I told him about the inspiring words, the beautiful music and the peaceful atmosphere. I talked about how good it makes me feel to know that life has meaning, and how that "meaning" has little to do with profit margins, environmental impact statements or spreadsheets. I even mentioned how pleasant it is to do something with my family that draws us together, rather than pushing us apart.

But he didn't want to talk about any of that. He dismissed my explanation with a vague indication that, yes, we could probably all do with a little more spirituality in our lives. Instead, he wanted to talk about the one thing that seems to dominate every aspect of society these days - image.

"I just can't get over it," he said, still stunned by the perceived incongruity of my relationship with my religion. "You're a church-goer." He shook his head wearily. "Well," he observed,

"there goes another stereotype."

To tell the truth, I'm not sure if he meant that I had shattered his concept of religious people, or if his perception of religious people had destroyed his image of me. Either way, he was having a hard time fighting through his own prejudices in an attempt to understand someone who looks at life through a different set of priorities.

It's almost always that way with stereotypes. Whether they are ethnic or sexual, racial or religious, they tend to boil down to a simplistic perspective that is only partially supported by facts - if at all. Stereotypes are comfortable because they help us categorize people, allowing us to decide whether or not we're going to like them without having to go to all the trouble of actually getting to know them. By using stereotypes, one can pass judgment on an entire race - or religion, gender or nationality - simply by assuming that "they're all alike."

Even though they're not - whoever "they" are.

Let's take you, for example. Your religion - or lack of same - is an important part of who you are. But it's only one part of a fascinating whole. Like everyone else on this planet, you are unique. No one can classify you by one trait or characteristic

Junior Theatre to present 'Phantom Tollbooth'

San Diego won't want to miss the musical adaption of Norman Juster's popular children's book, The Phantom Tollbooth, presented by San Diego Junior Theatre. This zany musical about the fantastical journey to an imaginary land where digits and letters add up to crazy fun opens April 16 and runs through May 2 at the Casa del Prado Theatre in Balboa Park.

"The Phantom Tollbooth" features Milo, a bored boy who receives a magic tollbooth and uses it to enter a crazy world where the King of Letters and the King of Numbers are feuding over which is the most important. Rhyme and Reason, the two beautiful princesses, are called on by the kings to decide the issue. When both princesses agree that letters and numbers are equally important, the angry kings lock them away. Milo realizes that he must rescue the two princesses in order to rescue the kingdom from its "no rhyme nor reason" chaos.

The production is directed by Michael Erickson and choreographed by a Junior Theatre alumnus, Micheal Bonds, who is one of San Diego's hottest dancers. The musical is performed and crewed by the students of the San Diego Junior Theatre. Tickets, on sale now, are $5-$7 (discounts are available for groups and seniors.) Call 239-8355 for tickets and information or 239-1311 for information on all Junior Theatre programs.

Walk with animals to benefit disaster plan

Devoted dog walkers and strolling enthusiasts will join forces on Sunday, April 18, at 8 a.m. in Balboa Park for the seventh annual "Walk with the Animals." Dog owners and their canine buddies will walk in a 2K Fun Walk. This festive event is sponsored by the county of San Diego Department of Animal Control and KUSI-TV 51 to benefit the county's Animal Disaster Fund. Activities planned for the morning include canine demonstrations. Participants can have their dogs vaccinated for rabies and licensed at a Rabies/Licensing Clinic on site from 7 to 7:30 a.m. before the event.

The fund enabled the Department of Animal Control to purchase equipment during the recent floods in the county to rescue helpless and drowning animals.

Registration on the day of the event will be held from 6 a.m. to 7:30 a.m. near Park Blvd. and Presidents Way in Balboa Park. For information and advance registration, call 595-4525.

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of: KENNETH PAUL MCBROOM

A PETITION has been filed by L. R. MCBROOM in the Superior Court of California, County of SAN DIEGO.

THE PETITION requests that L. R. MCBROOM be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

(This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. 'Not in my backyard' is the cry

by Bob Burns

In the Burns' castle, it is the responsibility of the husband (me) to make all the big decisions such as when to cut the grass, wash the car, and how deep to dig the holes for the roses. All of the other edicts are delivered by the Queen (Jackie). It is much the same in the city of Lemon Grove. The council makes all the big decisions, and the staff takes care of the others. So with that in mind, the subject of solid-waste materials, and their disposal, falls in our ken and we must make decisions.

The problem of landfills is a very large one and subject to the Not-In-My-Back-Yard syndrome. We are producing thousands of tons of the stuff every month, and have virtually no place to put it. Filling up the canyons is almost complete, and the few places that are still available must accept the "trash" from off site locations, and that rankles to say the least. There is much talk of "impact fees" which are simply a matter of charging the source for the use of the destination, and even a fee for allowing the material to "pass through" a neutral jurisdiction. State and federal environmental mandates are also causing the process to be very expensive.

In my "fools rush in, where Angels fear to tread" propensity, I am compelled to voice my opinion on the subject - for what it is worth.

I know that whatever we do is predicated upon cost. That which is the cheapest to do now, we will do. But in the long run, as an ultimate solution, I must ask "IS IT?" Will not the temporary solutions now, be just wasted when the future actions are decided to be realistic, after all?

The Burn's philosophy is that there are really only two answers that make sense in the long run until nuclear-fusion technology comes on the scene, and that will be many years hence. We must do one of two things. My first option would be an artificial island off our coast on the continental shelf. This would not only solve the disposal problem, but it would provide a facility with unlimited potential. an airport, marina, hotels, nuclear plant for power production or desalination, or a thousand other beneficial uses. All of our solid wastes, from the residential grass clippings to a graveyard for old ships, could be put to good use. A progressive, cofferdam system could begin with a small cavity in the ocean, being expanded as needed, and be perfectly safe for the environment; a completely contained depository for solid wastes that are inert.

My second choice would be to purchase land in the desert to the east of us to bury and cover these materials and eventually create a mountain. Actually we would be just doing what nature has been doing for eons, only faster and with the same result.

It seems to me that what we are doing, in microcosm, is just throwing the grass clippings from my yard over into my neighbor's property. We must have a better solution. If we continue as we are, we will have a Southern California that is as flat as a billiard table when all of the canyons are filled. Then, how will the rainwater flow? Where will we put our solid waste then? What will our paradise have become? Why will we have allowed this all to happen??

Lemon Grove has no place where a landfill could be placed, so we must think regionally. Why not really think regionally and get together with a real solution to the problem?

Countywide animal disaster plan developed

The county of San Diego Department of Animal Control has developed and activated the first known Mutual Aid Agreement among local cities for the coordination of emergency response rescue and sheltering for pets and other animals in the event of a disaster.

Under the agreement, each city within the county will provide personnel and resources to care for animals in other communities which are threatened or displaced by natural disasters such as fires, floods, or earthquakes.

The Department of Animal Control, which has the primary responsibility for directing animal related emergency responses, has developed regional procedures for the care, control and sheltering of animals during disaster periods. These procedures have been incorporated in the San Diego County Regional Emergency Plan.

The Department's continuing efforts to prepare for the needs of pets and other animals within our region include:

- Identifying and procuring emergency-response equipment and supplies;
- Providing emergency care supplies for Red Cross Emergency Care Centers;
- Establishment of a disaster trust fund for the collection of private funds for use by the Department to buy and maintain emergency disaster equipment.
- Development of disaster response training for Department and volunteer staff as well as mutual aid affiliates.

• Developing a Livestock Owner Information System (LOIS) which would: establish a Data Bank containing the names, locations and resources of regional livestock owners; provide emergency preparation information for livestock owners; and provide information on how to act/react before, during and after an emergency.

The following areas are being explored for future development:

- Expansion of community involvement opportunities and development of public information programs (such as Neighborhood Watch) to inform citizens of animal-related disaster preparedness.
- Development of informational brochures for possible distribution to animal owners through mass mailing efforts and/or inclusion with existing disaster information in telephone directories.
- Development of an animal-related disaster preparedness education program for local students of all ages.
